

ALASKA CHAPTER OF THE WILDLIFE SOCIETY
2008 WILDLIFE CONSERVATION AWARD

Dr. Erich Follmann
Professor of Zoology
University of Alaska, Fairbanks

Erich was a long-time member of the Alaska Chapter with a history of excellence in education and compassion toward students. He has led cutting-edge research on rabies on the North Slope, arctic fox ecology, and biotelemetry and has been a long supporter of the Alaska Chapter and UAF Student Chapter, in addition to other associated professional organizations in Alaska. In correspondence that led to the award nomination, Erich noted, "Over past years I have paid the membership dues for my grad students in the AINA (Arctic Institute of North America), and long ago for TWS too."

Dr. Follmann passed away in 2010. His obituary contains details of his distinguished career:

http://wildlife.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/12/tribute_erich_follmann.pdf