

THE WILDLIFE PROFESSIONAL

HELLBENT ON CONSERVATION

Biologists wade a 'never-ending stream of challenges' to conserve at-risk hellbenders

Conference plenary to take on public mistrust of science

On the front lines of wildlife disease

Navigating the profession through changing times

FEATURES

SPECIAL FOCUS + CAREER TRAJECTORIES

- 26 So Many Paths to Follow
Sharing our stories can inspire us and remind us that we're not alone
By Geriann Albers
- 28 Navigating the Ups and Downs
A dream job awaited, but only after lots of rejections
By Ashley Hobbs
- 30 A Life of Reinvention
Sometimes following a career path means starting over—and over—again
By Cheryl A. Clark
- 34 Staying Honest and True
For a person of color, raised in Appalachia, the path to becoming a wildlife professional can be a winding one
By Jesse L. De La Cruz
- 38 Following my Passion
A love of waterfowl led to a dream career
By Karla Guyn
- 41 The First Step Down Many Different Paths
A wildlife degree is just the start—the end is up to you
By Michael S. Fishman
- 46 Some Challenges Shouldn't be Part of the Job
What should early-career professionals consider when applying for seasonal work?
By Olivia Anderson
-
- 50 On the Front Lines of Wildlife Disease
Wildlife rehabilitators play important roles in avian flu surveillance
By Giselle Kalnins and Sherri Cox
- 53 Bridging the Gap between Science and the Public
Plenary speakers at the Annual Conference in Louisville will take on mistrust of science
By Joshua Rapp Learn

Departments

- | | |
|----------------------|----------------------------------|
| 4 Editor's Note | 14 Today's Wildlife Professional |
| 5 Leadership Letter | 57 Policy Perspectives |
| 6 Science in Short | 58 Field Notes |
| 10 State of Wildlife | 60 Gotcha! |

COVER STORY >>

Hellbent on conservation

Biologists wade a 'never-ending stream of challenges' to conserve at-risk hellbenders

By Joshua Rapp Learn

16

Credit: Andrew Zimmerman

26

Credit: Zach Frailey

53

Credit: Louisville Tourism

>> Log On for More

This publication is available online to TWS members on wildlife.org. References printed in blue indicate links in the online version of the magazine.